

Business Administration - Supply Chain Management Major

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

Overview

Supply chain management offers a dynamic and challenging environment. In this field, you can have a global impact, work on diverse tasks, and adapt to new technologies and trends.

In the Business Administration - Supply Chain Management diploma program, you'll learn how supply chain management is a key component of many industries, such as transportation, manufacturing, and oil and gas.

By the time you graduate, you'll have the skills and knowledge to maintain and support efficient supply chain processes in any business.

You'll learn how to:

- support critical supply chain functions in the workplace
- help organizations align their supply chain strategies with their vision and strategic priorities
- follow regulatory guidelines, uphold ethical practices, and meet industry and corporate standards to support organizations in building sustainable operations.

In today's data-driven world, analyzing data is a valuable skill. You'll gain expertise in summarizing data used to make informed decisions in supply chain functions and operations management. You'll also learn supply chain technology management systems and processes that enable business performance.

You'll develop related professional accountability, responsibility, change management, and leadership skills.

Upon completing this program, you'll be well-equipped to pursue a rewarding career in supply chain management. Understanding operations, procurement, logistics, and analytics will be your ticket to success in many business administration jobs.

Traits, skills and aptitudes

Those working in supply chain management tend to be methodical, directive and innovative.

You need:

- attention to detail
- an aptitude for numbers and data analysis
- strong communication skills
- adaptability
- quick decision-making skills.

You should enjoy managing complex projects and navigating rapidly changing environments.

Academic path
