

Cook

SCHOOL OF HOSPITALITY AND TOURISM

Overview

Learn to prepare food for hotels, restaurants and other establishments.

If you like a challenge, are passionate about food and enjoy working in a fast-paced environment, you'll enjoy a career as a cook. Cooks ensure the food is nutritious, inexpensive, and prepared safely.

Depending on the establishment, you may study menus to estimate food requirements and obtain the necessary food from storage or suppliers. You'll also wash, peel and cut vegetables, clean and cut meat, fish and poultry and keep kitchen equipment and cooking utensils clean.

You may also be involved in preparing, seasoning and cooking such foods as soups, salads, meats, fish, gravies, vegetables, desserts, sauces and casseroles, baking pastries, preparing portions on a plate and adding gravies, sauces and garnish to servings.

Throughout your career, you may also prepare buffets (for example, platters and showpieces) and special diets, oversee menu planning, regulate stock control and supervise kitchen staff.

While specific duties vary depending on the type of establishment, it is your responsibility to create appealing and healthy meals.

Traits, skills and aptitudes

Cooks love to share their passion for food, have a knack for creativity, are self-motivated and can work collaboratively. If you enjoy working in fast-paced environments and like challenges, you'll do well in this line of work.
