

Pre-Health Sciences

SCHOOL OF HEALTH AND PUBLIC SAFETY

Overview

Are you interested in a career in the healthcare field but aren't sure where you want to focus? Our Pre-Health Sciences certificate program allows you to simultaneously explore different career opportunities and build a related skillset through a variety of foundational courses.

In this program, you will:

- learn the skills, attitudes, and attributes expected of healthcare practitioners
- explore various healthcare professions
- build competencies in communications, math, and statistics
- train in the foundations of healthcare practice, including medical terminology, anatomy, and infection control.

In addition to the prescribed curriculum, you'll have the opportunity to select from elective courses that most suit your area of interest, including a course in Phlebotomy that can help you secure employment, even if you don't want to pursue additional education.

This certificate exposes you to numerous healthcare career pathways, serves as a strong foundation for further studies and equips you with the competencies to excel in more specialized programming.

As related, this program's curriculum overlaps with that of a number of programs in SAIT's School of Health and Public Safety, and, provides an avenue through which to meet some or all of the admission requirements for many of these programs.

Traits, skills and aptitudes

Those in the healthcare field tend to be social, methodical, objective, directive and innovative.

You need to:

- take pride in contributing to a healthy population
- be people-oriented
- be detail-oriented
- be a critical thinker
- have fine motor skills
- work well independently as well as part of a team
- be comfortable handling human blood and tissue
- be able to stand upright for extended periods of time
- be able to perform repetitive movements with your hands, wrists, and arms for extended periods of time
- be able to be comfortable with shift work, including nights and weekends.

Academic path

The curriculum in this certificate overlaps with that of a number of other programs in SAIT's School of Health and Public Safety, allowing you to receive course credit and get a head start in additional programs if you choose to continue your education.

Additionally, completing this certificate will qualify you to meet some or all of the admission requirements for many of these programs, including those in which the curriculum does not overlap.

We encourage you to explore all of our programming to identify bridging and pathway opportunities.

Credentials
